Fall of Troy a Huge Success.
The best picture in the world. The Fall of Troy, certainly lived up to its reputation at the Auditorium on Wednesday, and the packed houses that viewed it were unanimous in their signs of approval. This without a doubt is the most spectacular moving picture ever witnessed and the advance advertising it has had is not strong enough to do justice to the picture. The picture is a masterpiece of the art of the moving picture. As a lesson in history this picture is a masterpiece. The picture is a masterpiece of the art of the moving picture. POETRY.

MR. MICAWBER.

Though in distant years the name of Pickwick be remembered not, Deathless still survives Micawber and his greatness unforgotten!

While the loving light is fought on earth forever, let him glow! Roland of the arid desert and Bayard of the debtors' cell.

Life to him no oxalic fere where gods will give delight to harm; Unimpeachable his worth and indisputable his charm.

When the slender glass was garnished and his table sparsely spread, Mending then his boots with his mounting pointers gathered ahead.

When the damp December winds blew hoarse through London's murky street, Bright ambitions warmed his blood, and laughed to scorn his threat.

Planting gardens in mirage, and orchid hopes that fed on air, Some illiterate strain of blood, but thrice refined from earth, was there.

Was his sire an exiled king from Inishowen or green Kilgarr, Or his mother, of chattering breed, a Gaiety of the Gaiety?

—Elihu French, in the New York Sun.

THE ROAD.

Along the road I smelt the rose, The wild rose in its full bloom; And how it smelt, I only know, But with the scent I smelt the rose.

A girl's face at a window pane, Gazing through tears that fell like rain. 'Tis twelve years now, so I suppose.

Twelve years ago, 'Twas then I "Love is a burden bitter-sweet; And he who runs must not be taught, For what I heard myself repeat: 'Love is a burden bitter-sweet
